Gaglardi Biggest Issue Here

What's going on out there in election land? More to the point, what do the voters of B.C. think is going on?

In an attempt to find out what impact has been made by politicians in this so-far curiously featureless campaign, the Victoria Times has sent a team of reporters out into the hustings to talk to the people whose votes August 30 will decide the province's political future.

The first of the Times' reports "From the Hustings" comes from Kamloops where, not surprisingly, the main election issue seems to be the incumbent MLA Phil Gag-

KAMLOOPS - If there is a Social Credit riding In British Columbia that can get along without Premier Bennett it is probably Kamloops.

While other Socred campaigns in the B.C. interior are following the premier's lead and getting off to slow starts, Kamloops is off and running and it's not difficult to determine why.

Reports Anger Clancey

Bill Clancey, one of Premier Bennett's public relations hirelings, said Thursday his lawyers are investigating news coverage of a Tuesday press conference he organized in Vancouver at which Pre-mier Bennett didn't appear.

Clancey said he was upset with the way Vancouver's newspapers and some radio stations reported the event.

More than 30 reporters went to the news conference under the impression Premier Bennett would appear along with officials of Teck Corp., a resource firm involved in financing the development of the Sujunka coal deposit near etwynd, B.C.

Clancey, the focus of a series of angry exchanges with some reporters at the conference who charged they had been led there under false pretences, maintained that his office had never said the prewould attend and that this developed mainly as a

It is almost impossible to feel neutral about Gaglardi as which may account for the ex traordinary eagerness of the opposition campaigns.

There is something about Gaglardi's style that makes his opponents strongly suspect he will use dirty pool if he has to, to win the election. Take the sign controversy that bubbled up this week.

Food prices in Canada soared last month with sharply higher price tags on meats and vegetables, sending the co sumer price index up more than usual for this time of year.

In percentage terms, the over-all index rose 1.2 per cent in July and stood 4.5 per cent higher than a year earlier. Food prices were up 3.6 per cent in July over June and stood 6.9 per cent higher than in July 1972. It was the stiffest

However, farm market sources have indicated that higher prices are likely to prevail this fall for meats and vegetables in Eastern Canada.

Heavy rains have damaged field and food crops in East-ern Ontario and Western Quebec, reducing the supply of veg-etables and forcing farmers to pay higher prices for livestock

fallers have backed down in their stand against coast forest companies and their own union, and are expected to be back on the job Monday after a four-month wildcat

The decision to return to work came Thursday after a meeting in Parksville. Although the fallers voted 137-131 to stay off the job, their steering committee de-cided that there was enough support to warrant a return to MacMillan Bloedel vicepresident H. R. Chisholm said any men who have not returned to work by Tuesday ered to have resigned from the company.

"In view of the lengthy absences of some of our employees from their jobs, and the need to get into full production again, it will be necessary to hire or train replacements for any employees who do not intend to work,' Chisholm said.

"For this reason, those who

as having resigned from the company and their jobs will be posted for other union members to apply.'

The fallers have been without money since they walked out four months ago and many are encountering financial difficulties. In addition, their cause has been weakened by return to work of many of their own people.

Spokesman Chuck Evans said that with the defections from rebel ranks and the obvious split in opinion among the remainder, it was time to call it quits.

"We decided to recommend they accept it under certain conditions," he said.

He said the provisions are the forest companies agree to maintain seniority, reinstate any men who had been fired and show no discrimination to the strikers The fallers had been push-

The fallers feel they can make more money under the old formula, which varied from camp to camp. But the IWA and Forest In-asked the NDP about it and that was the first that head-quarters had heard.

Nevertheless, at least two parties were planning a trap for the culprit. To the outsider the whole affair seemed more humorous than serious.

Besides, it seemed to suit Kamloops, a brash and busy community, accustomed to rugged methods of getting things done. So what, if a few signs were disappearing.

There are more pressing tial issues. Population has grown enough in the last four years to add 6,000 new voters to the riding, which is peopled mainly by residents of the Kamloops City area. The boundaries of surrounding municipalities are posing difficult jurisdictional and service problems, the typical result of happy go lucky growth of the kind that makes for prosperity, for the moment at least.

Trucks rumble through downtown, and sometimes crash out of control on the long hill into town that should have been eliminated by a highway bypass.

Probably the biggest beef of Kamloops citizens is the traffic tie-up on each side of the Overlander Bridge, which connects the main part of the city with the newest and biggest sprawls on the north side of the Thompson.

The citizens want a new bridge built by their provincial government, and Kamstill too youthful to know that it will only lead to more sprawling subdivision and more traffic tie-ups and the need for another bridge, and another.

There is a new pulp mill that sends out the awful sulphur odor, and a mysterious white fallout appears at times.

The boxy houses of incongruously named Oak hills subdivision north of town are still stained with silt after the disastrous June flooding.

A blond housewife says there is no political issue being built on the blunder of the government in approving the subdivision's flood protection, which failed exactly as

The Gaglardi staff admit to being more concerned about the resurgent PC's than either perals or NDP. Gaglardi always talks about cutting red tape and getting the job done. He and Kamloops go well together. Kam-loops sprawls and grows and doesn't worry about sub-divisions on flood plains.

In addition to his public relations duties for Bennett, Clancey operates his own public relations firm. He said he just signed an account with Teck but expects to lose it after Tuesday's fiasco.

Clancey said his office notified newspaper business editors and radio newsmen that Bennett would make a statement at the Teck conference.

During the conference, Clancey read a telegram announcing that Bennett would not be able to attend because he felt his appearance would have been too political.

"There was no promise that the premier would be there," Clancey said.

'Feathered' Road Signs

Somewhere east of Abbotsa pungent, vaguely-iar and momentarilyunidentifiable odor through the car. The Hosford caravan was racing across the Fraser delta with places like Manning Park, the Okanagan Valley and Hell's Gate upper most in our minds. That penetrating stink broke our reveries.

As each of us looked enquiringly at the other, someone said "skunk" and the spell. was broken. If we needed any more proof that we were welland-truly in the mainland, here it was; and squashed carcass at the side of the road, but still, unmistakably,

We continued on our way, me wondering what would be next on the list of birds and mamals found on the mainland and not on Vancouver Island, the rest of the family hoping it wouldn't be another

A lunch break at Bridal Veil Falls provided the answer for my speculations. It came in the form of several confiding birds sporting black caps and white cheeks. Their

TRADE MARK

The smaller crows of the Pacific coast probably seldom penetrate farther inland than Somewhere between there and Princton the crows of the interior take over. We didn't see any crows in Manning Park, only ravens. Anyway, I would have to hear a crow before I could identify it.

Size isn't much good unless you've got the two together. Their voices on the other hand, are their trade mark. The higher pitched, more nasal caw of the coast crow is quite different from the fullthroated caw of his interior

I didn't linger long over the crow problem because ahead lay such birds as Western and Eastern Kingbirds in the Okanagan country. I must admit to a slight feeling of homesickness for the prairies at the sight, and sounds, of these birds bickering and hunting from fencepost perches along the highways.

Despite their names both were quite common in the Okanagan. The black and white of the eastern, and the sulphur and grey of the west-ern, are a welcome part of the fauna of the southern interior valleys of British Columbia, but are seldom seen on Vancouver Island.

A western kingbird, seen near Ashcroft, turned out to be our last connection with the birds of the interior. Farther south both the country and its birds confirmed this.

By the time we reached Yale, the most coastal forest had replaced the arid hills and canyons of the lower Thompson River, And a pair of Stellar's Jays in a roadside park near Hope, were as good as any roadsign saying Gulf Islands Ahead

The Evil That Men Do

Northern Ireland over the past months can so epitomize the tragedy of that land as the latest reports of the participation of so many children in the bloodshed. The children's hatred and callous disregard for human life which has been shown increasingly in the course of the struggle must be one of the cruellest harvests of the folly of adults. The children are the next generation, and it is difficult to believe that the incredible sentiments which many of them in Belfast, Londonderry and other Ulster communities now hold will not be carried forward to create further tragedies in the years to

The other side of the picture is

None of the sorry events in seen in reports of other Ulster children who have become so terrorized by explosions, fires and fighting that they do not dare to venture out of doors. They will be as sick in their troubled way as the others who have accepted their world of murder and destruction and become an active part of it. The men who make and place the bombs in Ulster in a twisted belief that they are working for freedom and right will have much to answer for. The soldiers and civilian adults they kill are only part of the horror. The morally and mentally blighted lives of their own children will be the lasting evidence of the wrongs they perpetrate today.

The continuing release of IRA leaders from internment is helping to lift some of the pressure on Secretary of State Whitelaw and open new possibilities of peaceful approaches. But it is clear that logic will play little part in stopping the fighting. Regardless of right or wrong the struggle has gone beyond reason to the point where it appears that only exhaustion will set the scene for useful discus-

Britain's dilemma in trying to find a settlement that will protect the rights of both the irreconcilable sides; to find, in effect, a solution which may not even exist; should deter criticism and condemnation from outside. One thing is certain, bombs will not solve the problem. Perhaps it is already too late for this generation to discover the answer -, and that might also apply to the next.

What Is 'Normally Expectable'?

Whether Sen. Thomas Eagleton's mental illness of some years ago or the controversy about that illness caused Sen. McGovern to drop his running mate from the ticket, the branch of medicine which deals with mental ailments is coming to be seen as a science concerned, ultimately with human, and therefore changing, values.

Obviously, a definition of normal behavior proffered by an ancient Babylonian would differ from such a definition as we moderns could devise. And this is, perhaps, the basic problem. A psychiatrist who attended the recent convention of the American Psychiatric Association in Dallas, Dr. Roy Grinker, gave this opinion: "Sigmund Freud once said psychoanalysis should be able to help the person adjust to the normally expectable environment. But now we have to modify that because the normally expectable environment has come to mean the unexpecta-

In a world in which the future is so open to change, to "shock," and when, as a consequence, values are undergoing transformation there arise more problems than there are as yet answers. Technological change and rapidity of transportation are the husk, not the core, of modern man's quandary. The core is the lack of a set of values adjusted to an unpredictable, accelerating environment. It

No Planes For a Rescue Effort

Protests from the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union against the scarcity of rescue aircraft on this coast - a criticism levelled when a request for a search plane was reportedly denied on the ground that all available armed forces aircraft were being used in another search - underscores a problem which threatens to grow in the years ahead.

The volume of small-craft traffic, both commercial and pleasure, shows no signs of abating. In the case which drew the UFAW protest, two persons were reported missing from a mishap on the stretch between Kelsey Bay and Port Neville. A fleet of about a dozen fishing boats found one Two of the four people aboard survived.

Whether or not the quick despatch of an aircraft to the scene could have saved two more lives is a question for which there is no positive answer. There is, however, persistent speculation on the point as a result of the rescue force's inability to make an aircraft avail-

The minister of transport, to whom the protest was addressed, should keep that fact in mind as he reviews facilities on this coast. No rescue service can provide an absolute guarantee that no one will be lost in future boating accidents. But the federal department should satisfy itself that adequate equipment is on call to meet most emergencies - and meet them quickly.

may take generations of trial and effort to work out stable values to which we can refer unerringly. In the meantime, debate on matters like the Eagleton affair will probably become routine.

Snowball?

Hot weather campaigning takes a strange turn when backbencher Howard McDiarmid finds it necessary to assure residents on his door-knocking route that Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi "doesn't stand a snowball's chance in hell of ever becoming premier of British Columbia." This follows a self-adulatory comment from the minister about his prospects for the senior office - a Gaglardi-ism to match others with which readers are familiar.

Dr. McDiarmid may be correct in his assessment of the Gaglardi limitations and the reactions of other back-benchers to the Kamloops candidate. Embarrassing as he may be to some members of the Social Credit Party, the welfare minister, who never hides his light under a bushel, has revealed remarkable political recuperative powers. It's not every cabinet minister who can be publicly discredited in one portfolio and bounce back into another.

Mr. Gaglardi appears to have a protective sheathing more effective than an asbestos wrapping for the proverbial snowball. It's a thought to cause Dr. McDiarmid's Oak Bay audience some concern.

Mrs. Noggins Looks It Over

heard little of the nation's affairs until Mrs. Alfred Noggins dropped in today with a gift of her homegrown vegetables and the news from her always reliable

"Right now," she observed, "it's the dog days, as you can tell by all the barkin' and yelpin' in the kennels of politics. But like Trudeau says, ther'll be no election before it's required strictly in the national interest and our latest secret public opinion poll shows that the gover'mint can win.

Of course, says Trudeau, we never did intend to call a June election and all our spring campaignin' through the country and Turner's sunshine budget was just for 'ealthy exercise and to confuse the treacherous enemy. The first secret poll showed that we'd likely lose but that 'ad nothing to do with the postponement of election day. It was a sheer

Nerve of Tories

"Anyways, after the shock of the poll, the gover'mint waited for the public to come to its senses and remember that only the Liberal party is fit to govern the nation, as 'istory demonstrates. And what really distresses Trudeau is the nerve of the Tories in thinkin' they're fit to do it. The voters will certainly resent such arrogance

"Bob Stanfield doesn't appreciate these fine points and, bein' a man of principle, 'e nacherally welcomed a man of opposite principles into the bosom of 'is family. But then, Paul Hellyer was never a Liberal any more than Stanfield should get along fine together.

"As Uncle 'Erbert told us when 'e was united in 'oly matrimony with that rich widow in Birmingham, it's a marriage of inconvenience. And it didn't last long. But meanwhile, since Stanfield and Hellyer disagree about everything, the opposition party is at least as fully united as the Trudeau cabinet.

"Anyways, Hellyer kills off 'is maction Canada without a word of remorse, denounces the Liberal party for ruinin' the country with 'is own assistance as a loyal cabinet minister over the last two terrible decades of depression, and almost persuades Stanfield to adopt 'is policy of controllin' wages and prices. But not quite.

"Perhaps we'll use controls and perhaps we won't, says Stanfield, with a Maritimer's weather eye on the labor vote. So 'is election platform is a big, fat, shiny maybe, or inflation if neces sary but not necessarily inflation. I tell you, sir, Mackenzie King still governs Canada from another and better world. Even Trudeau understands that fact and is goin' to the country on King's old proposition that it's either 'im or chaos, or probably both.

... wicked work ethic

"But Trudeau is always at the mercy of 'is friends. Just as things are goin' exactly accordin' to plan, young Munro suddenly pops up and tells the plain truth, which is unforgivable bad manners in an election year. Yes, says Munro, the gover'mint is fixin' to unload the burdens of society on the middle class and it should be grateful for the honor of bearin' them.

"You can imagine 'ow delighted Trudeau was with 'is young colleague for lettin' that ugly black cat out of the bag. And after bein' well spanked by the prime minister. Munro explains that 'e media and the gover'mint will never raise the taxes on the middle class until after the election. It 'as nothin' to be alarmed about before Christmas at the

PILSWORTH TORONTO STARS

"Then Stanfield plays 'is ace of spades by announcin' that 'e'll rejuce the taxes on everybody. And when they ask where 'e'll get the money to pay the bills 'e says that is the responsibility of the gover'mint, not the opposition, and the experts can figger out such a trifling matter after we're in office. In the meantime 'e can't afford to clutter up 'is mind with minor details.

"The details are for Turner to grapple with, and e's grapplin' like crazy and wonderin' why 'e ever took the job in a fit of absentmindedness. No matter, says Turner, with a brave television smile, everything is all right in Canada when the other nations are inflatin' their prices faster than ours. Why worry when the British people are drownin' in ten feet of water and the Canadians in only four feet? What could be fairer than

Temporary Accident

"Besides, says Turner, the American system of price controls won't work and will lead straight to disaster. But when it turns out that Nixon 'as cut 'is inflation to 'alf the Canajian rate, Turner says that's a temporary accident but perhaps, after all, we'll adopt controls ourselves, if the labor unions let us.

"So the gover'mint and the opposition are agreed on the grand policy of maybe. The only difference is that the opposition secretly 'opes that prices will rise fast enough in the fall to wreck the gover'mint, and the gover'mint 'opes that the final explosion can be delayed, with a little bit of luck, until the polls close on a scene of carnage.

"The real trouble, like Trudeau says, is the wicked work ethic. If people would only stop demandin' jobs our problems would soon be solved, but if they insist on workin' unethically then they'll 'ave to pay for the privilege by supportin' the decent, ethical citizens who refuse to destroy the country by producin' wealth. And if Trudeau is pretty unethical 'imself, and works day and night, 'e can be excused because 'e contracted the bad 'abit long ago, in 'is misspent youth, and can't kick it.

"Well," said Mrs. Noggins, "I guess that's all the news. And since no party expects to win a majority you'd better enjoy this lovely, election-free summer while you can, with Trudeau's kind permission. It'll soon be over, so brace yourself for a glorious autumn of mists and mellow fruitfulness, like the poet fellow said, and a bumper crop of pure, No. 1 Northern, mis-mash."

Credibility

Your recent editorial referring to Mr. Maudlin's resignation for indiscretion while in office in England impressed me. I agree that our present legislators might well take heed.

How long must we overlook political manipulation by cabinet ministers whose indiscretions are rewarded by a new

How long must we be gulled by promises? The municipalities are starved by provincial neglect, yet no new formula is devised to help them.

Alone among provincial premiers, our premier refuses to attend the federalrovincial meeting in Ottawa. He complains of Ottawa's cavalier treatment of us, but sulks at home when he should be improving relations.

Why aren't Hydro rates lowered? Why are mental health services understaffed and inadequate? Why this veil of secrecy concerning the spending of our money? Now we are to be promised relief from income tax and death duties.

If Mr. Bennett has such a surplus of our money surely we deserved such implementation three years ago. This promised Kelowna Charter, this political gimmick, this piece of paper whose parochial name betrays its insignificance, comes too late, after three years of deprivation and slick excuses.

Are we such fools as to believe we can indefinitely receive concessions from the public purse, handed out like goodies from a benevolent Papa, without replenishing it?

Mr. Bennett's right hand ladles out neeties, while his left hand digs into our pockets to pay for them and to buy our votes. He should be known as the Prime Juggler, not the Prime Minister, of British Columbia,

As the winds of change sweep out the staleness and frustration endured too long, let us welcome honest members who care about people.

Mr. Derrill Warren is a vigorous, youthful leader who will work to restore our faith in politicians. I would like to take pride in our elected leaders instead of making excuses for them. - Patricia McKenzie, 2379 McNeill Ave.

Running Mate With Potential

WASHINGTON - George McGovern virtually backed into the selection of Sargent Shriver as his ticket-mate but he has latched onto the best that is left of the high aims and high hopes of the New Frontier days.

Shriver was not what McGovern had in mind. In Miami the name came up only because Pierre Salinger raised it. On this second go-round, McGovern was so anxious to court his fellow senators that he ignored the pressures for Shriver until all the senatorial prospects had eliminated themselves.

But the pressures stayed right at his elbow because key members of his staff, led by Henry Kimmelman, Frank Mankiwicz, and Gary Hart, argued long and hard for Shriver. It is less crucial to court the party regulars, they said, than to round out the ticket with a man who will broaden but not affront the McGovern political base. This group cast both Muskie and Humphrey as affronts.

More Enthusiasm

Shriver will certainly bring to the ticket more enthusiasm than Muskie, whose taste for national politics and acceptance have been eroded by a hard year. Yesterday's frontrunner is today's reminder to the Democratic establishment of how wrong it was. Muskie would have cost money because he wanted his primary bills paid. Shriver will bring because his appeal reaches. beyond McGovern's, into the drawingrooms of wealthy Democrats,

Moreover in a time when the impulse exists to rebel against politicians and their mores, Shriver bears little of the faint. He is not typical of the species because he is more open in public and more naive in the backrooms. He comes through, at 56, as one who still believes the world can be improved and wants another chance to work at it. He enters politics at a high level only because the lower levels were closed off by professionals who sensed he was not of their

in the McGovern deliberations. He is warm and friendly with his brother-inlaw and while he did not encourage his selection, he took no strong step to oppose it. This is a slight but not an awesome gamble for the youngest of the Kennedys so long as the McGovern-Shriver ticket seems headed for oblivion.

Certainly Shriver is being nominated more for his virtues than for his political successes. The latter have been restricted to the repeated and remarkable jobs of salesmanship which he carried out in behalf of the Peace Corps and the poverty program. He has always been at his best selling causes which few were willing to buy, a skill certainly appropriate to the Democrats' present situation.

Obstructed

But when he tried to run in Illinois, Mayor Richard Daley got Lyndon John son to send him as ambassador to France. And when he tried to run in Maryland, he found he had stayed too long in France. When he tried to help Muskie launch an imaginative appeal for volunteer support, he banged against the shoal of caution which later sank the Maine Senator.

In fact Shriver seems to have nearly concluded that he was not cut out to be an associate of politicians when the call from McGovern came. He had pulled off into a high-geared practice of international law, an area in which his electric persuasions and open personality were more appreciated.

With small thanks to his own discernment, McGovern's last choice may be his best. At least he has a running-mate with more potential than the senators he courted to bring the Democratic ticket to By THEODORE SHABAD New York Times and motion pictures suggest vestiges of prejudice and as-sertions of national feelings.

One Russian recently remarked at the time of President Nixon's visit to Moscow that he found greater affinity with Americans than with some of the Asian ethnic groups in the Soviet Union.

"I would not want my daughter to marry a Yakut," he asserted. The 300,000 Yakuts, a Turkic-speaking people of northeast Siberia with significant cultural gains under the Soviet regime, are of Mongol stock

In an effort to win the loyalty of the various ethnic groups inhabiting the old Russian Empire, the Bolsheviks founded the Soviet state after the 1917 revolution on the principle of a complex network of autonomous ethnic territories coinciding roughly with the historical areas of settlement of the national

Within the limit of its republic, region or other autonomous area, each ethnic group was given the right to foster an education and culture in its own language, but under the over-all umbrella of Communist ideology. In terms of a widespread slogan, ethnic cultural development, became "national in form and socialist in content."

Against this background of ethnic separateness, both the common ideological constraints and the predominant influence of the ethnic Russians - every second Soviet citizen is a Russian - have been major forces working for ultimate integration.

According to Communist doctrine, the blossoming of ethnic cultures is to bring about a further stage of development when national groups will disappear as district cultural and linguistic entities and be fused into "a -single mon socialist culture with a single common language."

In view of the predominant position of Russian, which not only is spoken by the 130 million ethnic Russians but is also the second language of 20 million non-Russians, there appears to be little doubt what the common language would ultimately be.

By ROBERT TURNBULL

(From an article in the Travel section of The Globe and Mail.)

Victoria is two-faced. One face is that of a genteel, somewhat patronizing dowager; the other is that of a crassly commercial tart grasping for tourist dollars.

At first glance the capital of British Columbia is attractive. Baskets bright with flowers hang from lamp standards, a wide expanse of smooth green lawn sweeps from in front of the Parliament Buildings to the curb of Belleville Street beside the Inner Harbor (a slightly tarnished jewel on the lady's bosom), and around the on Government Street the Empress Hotel looks down in creeper-covered haughtiness on the scene

Less likeable, however, are the mercenary lines being etched on the city face; lines composed of a pseudo-British atmosphere of toffees, Toby mugs, tar-tans, afternoon teas and double-decker London buses. In years past Victoria's character was pleasing and, I felt, genuine. Today it is hoked-up and has only one ob-— to part tourists from their money. Why a Canadian city with so much going for it that is why a Canadian city with so intent going for it distinctively Canadian in scene, history and breeding, should feel it necessary to ape England — and not all that well, either — to impress American tourists is a puzzle, the answer to which can only be avarice.

The gentler Victoria of yesteryear is deteriorating, horse-drawn, sightseeing tallyhos, striped pink-andwhite, which line Belleville Street once seemed quaint te. Now they seem jejune

A stroll past them means running the gauntlet of side walk shills pestering you to take a ride; a few paces farther on is another gauntlet, this time from shills importun-ing passers-by to ride the red, double-decker London buses standing on Government Street.

In short, a carnival midway atmosphere that is not in keeping with a lady-like Victoria.

Equally distressing is the proliferation of other com-monplace commercial attractions of the sort foisted on tourists almost everywhere — a wax museum ("they seem alive!"), an underseas garden ("as forbidding and at the same time more beautiful than any lush jungle known to man"), a fort ("see the defiant bastion with its n jail and muzzle-loading cannons . . . '') and This, then, is a little bit of England-in-Canada? .") and so forth. viewpoint)

Rural Service For Doctors

THE TORONTO STAR An Editorial

When the state pays all but a small fraction of medical students' education it surely has the right to require them practice to communities Further than that, the state has the opportunity — if not the responsibility — to require some time in doctor-scarce

The University of Toronto has recognized there is a serious problem of doctor distribution by giving preference next year to students from smaller communities who apply to the medical school. students from small towns will be more likely to return to such areas to practise.

At present big urban centres have a strong attraction for graduate doctors. Of the graduation classes from university between 1965 and 1957 - surveyed in 1971 only 13.6 per cent are practising in small towns.

The University of Toronto close track of its graduates, notes that almost all of them spend the first four years in general practice while they pay off debts. (A medical eduon costs the student about $2,000 a year, although the province will take care of the costs for any qualified stu-dents who are accepted but cannot afford the fee.)

It would seem no great hardship to require all dents to contract for a twoyear stay in a small community of the province's choice immediately following graduation. A similar requirement should be made of newly arrived immigrant doctors.

At the same time, the prov ince must provide the clinical facilities and housing for such young doctors. They could not afford to set up an entire practice in a northern town and find a house - on their own. The town would likely make a contribution as well.

Southern Ontario is rich in doctors. And the doctors have fared well from the education largely provided by the state Most doctors can pay off their education debts in years of practice with an income of average gross income of $47,000 a year. Now it is time service in the graduate structure. It may even be an op portunity that many young come, given the alternative of a lifetime in our crowded

They rejected a detailed CBC, which would have given native broadcasters at least some access to the satellite system. In doing this, they deliberately violated one of the government's own principles for northern development an important policy statement this year, the federal government pledged that northern development in future will be governed by three objectives: meeting "the needs and aspirations" of napeoples, ensuring a healthy economic development, and maintaining the ecological balance.

The decision on the satellite completely ignored the needs and aspirations of native peoples while giving full consideration to the minority population of whites in the North, most of them transients.

19 DAYS LEFT ALONG COMES AMMUNITION

CP Staff Writer

British Columbia's 1972 "Hansard" was published this week, four months after the third session of the 29th Legislative Assembly ended, and it provides opposition parties with enough political ammunition to embarrass the Social Credit government 19 days before the Aug. 30 provincial election.

The provincial record, called Debates of the Legislative Assembly, tears apart the planks of the elimination of succession duties and gift taxes contained in Premier Bennett's Kelowna Charter, announced June 1, by putting in print the premier's stand on these twin issues just a few months ago.

On March 13, during second reading of Bill 23, the amendment to the Succession Duty Act, the premier is quoted by Debates on page 744 as saying: "This government believes a broad base for taxation is the most suitable method to raise the fund necessary to carry out essential services provided

The debates quotes Bennett as saying "the government is aware that thrifty, industrious and prudent citizens in our so-ciety need encouragement and are entitled to encouragement to continue their contributions to the economy of the province. The British Columbia succession duties will therefore only apply to very large estates as basic exemptions outlined . . . eliminate must beneficiaries."

During debate on the bill, Bennett is also quoted as saying: "As long as I'm minister of finance, I will never agree to tax the people with low incomes and let the people with wealthy estates off scot-free, my friend."

Asked to withdraw the bill, which he now intends to do under the Kelowna Charter, Bennett replied: "I don't want to withdraw reducing taxation. I certainly will not. I want to say this bill, if it isn't passed today, means that taxes will be higher than they would be if this bill passes

The 1014-page Debates quotes Bennett on pages 953-960 as a debate on the bill on March 24.

"... To protect its present succession duties it is necessary for the province, along with most of the other provinces, to levy a gift tax," Bennett is quoted as saying.

"I want to say this. That whether it's my family or any other family that makes money and develops partly on their own benefits, through their own abilities, but partly because of the economy established by this great people and by the great people we have in this province who come from every-where, without them they could not take this money. I say they should pay a part of it to the state because the state has that money in trust for all the people of the province - all

"This is a fair tax because without this tax our succession duties would be worth nothing because you could give it all away and therefore your succession duties would be of no

"I want to say that this is a fair tax and I move second

New Democratic Party members joined the government majority to vote in favor of the bill while the Liberals, along with Socred MLA Herb Capozzi of Vancouver Centre, voted nay, the Debates recorded.

The NDP candidates for the forthcoming elections have charged that the Socreds backtracked on succession duties and gift taxes because of pressure from the rich while the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives have told the people they were right all along and the Kelowna Charter is the result of some afterthought of the government on these Commercial fishermen, businessmen and Gulf Island residents are angry about Sidney's closure of a wharf built fishermen at All Bay.

G. SCOTT WALLACE

G. SCOTT WALLACE

It is important that electors know exactly why I resigned from the government and now seek re-election as a Progressive Conservative. As a government back bencher, I found that I could play little or no part in the formation and discussion of policy or intended legislation. During Sessions of the Legislature, discussion does take place in caucus, but not about basic policy, only about draft legislation, which is hardly ever amended to any degree. On any important issue, the edict is handed down from the Premier, who hardly ever attends caucus to hear the views of his colleagues. Between Sessions, from April to late January, a period of almost ten months, even this minimal degree of participation by the private member ceases, since the Premier and Cabinet then have no communication whatever with the private members. On Aug. 20th 1971 the Premier stated that back benchers cannot be active participants in the process of governing. This is not my concept of the democratic system nor is it likely to be the feeling of the people who elected me. For the private member has his vital responsibility, to the people who elected him, to represent their needs and opinions and convey them to the leader and the cabinet. As an impotent figurehead in the government I could not meet this responsibility.

On August 17th, 1971 I declared myself an Independent, On convey them to the leader and the figurehead in the government I could not meet this responsibility.

On August 17th, 1971 I declared myself an Independent On January 10th 1972 I joined the Progressive Conservative party. Why? Because that party under a new, young vigorous talented leader, Derril Warren, belives in all the fundamentals of democracy which the present government scorns. The Progressive Conservative party stands for an open style of team government, in which all members play an active positive part in the process of governing and in which individuals have ready access to members, Ministers and the Premier. At least a Progressive Conservative Premier will answer letters from citizens.

Open government means radio and TV coverage of the House, a Hansard to record exactly what is said, an Auditor General to give detailed financial accounting, an Ombudsman to protect the rights of individuals and standing committees of the Legislature the year round to listen to the opinions of the people.

I am convinced voters in Oak Bay will ponder carefully which type of government they prefer.

seed prices worked lower on commission house selling near the close on the grain exchange, following a similar trend in Chicago soybeans.

Flax prices also declined, dipping below previous close levels mainly on a lack of solid offerings.

Oats and barley prices gained slightly on strong domestic shipper buying while rye advanced following reports of higher U.S. wheat markets.

Volume of trade Thursday was 1,585,000 bushels of flax, 1,725,000 of rapeseed and 799,000 of rye.

Joint Aircraft Alliance Seen

VANCOUVER (CP) - Expanding technological capabilities and burgeoning economies of nations bordering the Pacific basin trading area presage the emergence of strong new trans-ocean industrial alliances in the field of aviation, a United States executive said here.

jet transports flying the world's airline routes today have come from U.S. production lines — two things have happened that portend a change," Kotchian said. He cited the cost of financing a new aircraft develop-ment and the developing tech-nologies of other nations. Kotchian also predicted a substantial upswing in revenue passenger miles travelled on Pacific area airlines. Lock-heed analysts have placed the increase at a whopping 370 per cent in the 1970s.

Gold Prices

Inch Down

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold resumed its week-long downtrend today after a brief upturn on London's free market Thursday. The U.S. dollar held steady.

Gold has been dropping fairly steadily in Europe's free markets from the record

$72 an ounce reached earlier this month to a low of $64.75 in London Wednesday. Dealers blamed the drop on speculators taking profits.

On foreign exchange mar-kets, the U.S. dollar improved

National Rules Favored

WINNIPEG (CP) — A survey by a University of Manitoba professor indicates a substantial number of brokerage firms and other financial institutions favor some sort of national securities commisreplace various provincial po-licing bodies which many of those surveyed called inef-ficient and inadequate.

The survey was conducted by George M. Charles, an as-charles sent questionaires to all brokerage firms which are members of Canadian stock exchanges and to mutu-al fund management companies, insurance companies with investment portfolios, trust companies and banks. He received replies from 54 per cent of those approached.

Eighty-three per cent said they were opposed to the present system. The majority of these favored a strong national countries. tional securities system while others said they would accept a national securities act jointly administered by a national commission and the various provincial commissions. .

The 17 per cent who favored retention of the present sys-tem said provincial commissions are performing ade-quately and creation of a national commission would in-crease bureaucracy.

Charles himself, while fa-voring a single federal securities agency, said he felt the most practical solution for the present lies in the joint federal-provincial area.

He proposed a uniform se-curities act for all provinces, with representatives of a fed-eral agency in each centre where provincial commissions are located.

Mr. Boisvert said Mr. Payette should be allowed to claim legitimate expenses in-curred in his stock promo-tions, and referred the case back to the revenue depart-ment for "reconsideration"

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) - A Quebec mining stock promoter, who declared an eight-year cumulative income of $155,556 and was assessed by the tax collector for an income of $3.1 million, has partially won an appeal to the tax review board.

day ruled that the revenue department should reconsider its latest assessment, taking into account some of the expenses incurred by Paul Pay-ette in amassing his income.

The judgment, written by board member Maurice Bois-vert, says Mr. Payette did not keep adequate financial accounts of his transactions, but has co-operated with the tax department in trying to reconstruct what happened during the years 1947 to 1954. Mr. Payette-not otherwise identified in the judgment-listed himself on his tax return as an employee, and said he had salaries totalling plus "other income" totalling $47,516.

The revenue department, after lengthy investigation, added more than $2.9 million to Mr. Payette's declared income, and taxed him accordingly. He appealed to the board, saying his earnings were overstated by the department. Moreover, he argued, some of the income was capital gains, not then

PROMOTED OIL. COPPER The board said there is no doubt Mr. Payette was in the business of promoting stock in oilfields and copper mines. He staked properties which he sold to firms he incorporated and then sold shares in Canada and the U.S. The bulk of his income was not capital gain, but in-

"It is abundantly clear that the appellant was none other than a skilful, capable, active promoter, well versed in the art of spinning appealing fan-tasies," Mr. Boisvert wrote.

"I have no hesitation in finding that appellant was in business to make profits from splendid dreams which might have become reality, profits which he made during his continuous dream, dream projected by propa-ganda very appealing to idlers and those hungry for quick profits, people who live in the brokers' offices with their eyes glued to the stock market quotations board.'

IDENTIFIES FIRMS Firms identified in the judgment were Gaspe Oil Ventures Ltd., Quebec Oil Development Ltd., Associated Development Ltd., Tar Point Co., Bald Mountain Oil Co. and Miller Copper Mines Ltd.

Coach Contends 'Gap Is Closed'

WINNIPEG (CP) - The ning cham pionships and Olympic trials ended Thursday with swimmers taking home a pile of records and coaches enthusiastic over the showings.

"This is by far our best nationals," said Nick Thiery of Toronto, former natonal team coach. "We have never before had a national championship where we had a time that was fastest in the world ... Several of our girls and a couple of the boys would have qualified for the U.S. team with their times here.

Thiery and Deryk Snelling, coach of the powerful Canadian Dolphins Swim Club Vancouver and the man who will handle Canada's Olympic swim team, said results indicate Canadians "have closed the gap."

"I think you could say we ave, improved more than the rest of the world has im-

Picture Isn't All Bright For B.C. Derby Anglers

Salmon fishing is only slightly improved in a number of Vancouver Island areas while catches dropped off considerably in other vicinities during the past week.

First, because of the interest in the B.C. Salmon Derby this veekend, we'll give a run-down on Saanich Inlet and Cowichan

And it isn't all that great?

The Narrows, Chesterfield Rock and Goldstream Island are yielding small springs up to 13 pounds at a rate of one or two fish per boat. The odd small coho is also showing and the mid-day tide change appears to be one of the most productive

Further north in the Inlet, early morning is the best time to pick up springs up to 20 pounds near Willis Point and Bamberton while many limit catches of smaller fish have been taken in ton while many limit catches of smaller has have been taken in Indian and Coles Bays on the afternoon flood tide.

Try using a No. 1 Kripple-K spoon, 150 feet of line and a planer in the early morning and gradually increase the depth as the day goes on — you might be pleasantly surprised.

Jacks form the main catch between Coal Point and the Deep Cove marker for those fishermen using 30 to 50 feet of line and about eight ounces of weight.

Word from Duncan indicates fishing is "no great screaming heck" because the big spawning runs are a little late this year. A few springs in the 40-pound range are hitting lures at Cowichan Bay and Separation Point, but success often requires

Now, as we turn to waters outside the derby area, we find

Now, as we turn to waters outside the derby area, we find fair catches of springs in Active and Porlier Passes.

Other springs up to 24 pounds are being landed near the Discovery Island Lighthouse and Trial Island, while a few coho in the five to eight pound range are coming in from Oak Bay waters. For springs, try working deep with 100 to 150 feet of line, one pound of weight and either super-strip or minnow. Coho are tackling bucktails.

Strip trolled on the end of 100 feet of line with aight suppose.

Strip trolled on the end of 100 feet of line with eight ounces of weight has proven to be a successful combination for springs up to 34 pounds in the evening at Pedder Bay. The kelp side of the bay remains the best choice and buzz-bombers using spinning gear are still picking up a few fish.

A limited number of coho up to eight pounds are also com ing in from the same vicinity.

Waters between Beechey Head and Church Island are still yielding "very good" returns of springs up to 35 pounds and a few coho as heavy as 10 pounds. Jacks abound in the same area and eight ounces of weight with 40 feet of line is sufficient to reach even the largest spring

Much the same conditions prevail near Secretary Island and Otter Point but the salmon are running deeper — use two pounds of weight and 150 feet of line.

Port Renfrew fishermen are picking up springs to 28 pounds and a few coho to 10 pounds in San Juan Bay. Favorite lure at the moment seems to be a multi-colored hootchle-

Reports indicate that Juan de Fuca net fishermen are picking up fair numbers of coho further up the west coast but the main run doesn't appear to have reached Port Renfrew yet. North of Cowichan Bay, returns have slowed down to "spotty." For every three trips out, a fisherman might pick up salmon, and this condition prevail right through to

Conversely, action is picking up off Bamfield, where coho up to 18 pounds are being taken near Pachena Bay and Ship Island on strip and flashtails, Franklin River is the current

Jumping back to the east coast, Point Holmes (during the evening) and Grant's Reef (at low tide) are producing some bluebacks and large springs. Returns are better in this area than they were last week, but it is by no means "good."

Campbell River action is starting to really pick up with springs up to 45 pounds being taken in Frenchman's Pool. Coho up to nine pounds are snatching bait and hardware near Cape Mudge, from the Red Buoy to Butlers and from Duncan Bay to Reca Point.

Glowing with optimism, Mitch Pechet officially took over the reigns of the Victoria Cougars for the 1972 Western Canada Hockey League season Thursday afternoon.

Cougar general-manager Eric Bishop announced Pechet's selection as coach at a news conference attended by most club officials.

"We never had any doubt who would coach the club once everything fell into place and we knew he (Pechet) would be staying in town," said Bishop moments before confirming that Pechet would return as Cougar coach.

Pechet, 54, managing-director of the Cougars before taking over coaching duties midway through last season when Fred Hucul resigned, didn't hesitate to forecast Victoria's from Medicine Hat Tigers,

Calvin Kitching (185 pounds) from Winnipeg Jets and Randy Wray a rugged defen-ceman from Flin Flon Bombers are all big players obtained earlier this week among five acquired in the equalization draft.

Cougars' pre-camp opens in Edmonton September 4 and the top prospects will join the rest of the club for the opening of training camp September 12 at Memorial Arena.

Asked how he expects to handle the team, Pechet said: "I'll be stressing conditioning ... unfortunately it's a game of pain and sacrifice.'

CANADA'S BEST EDUCATIONAL DIDN'TJUST HAPPEN

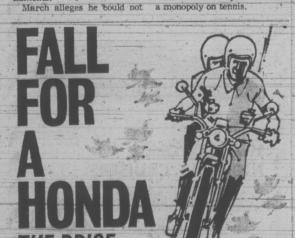

Two things go into making up an excellent educational system. First-rate teachers . . . and first-rate facilities. In both of these areas, British Columbia is fortunate indeed.

Our teachers are the best qualified and highest paid — in Canada. And our facilities at all levels of public education are unsurpassed. A recent advancement has been the creation of Regional Colleges throughout the province . . . greatly increasing the scope of post-secondary education.

Not surprisingly, British Columbia has the greatest percentage of people involved in public education of any province - 883,000, more than one-third of our entire provincial population.

It all adds up to the best educational system in Canada . . . a system your Social Credit Government has fostered by making Education the most important single area within the Provincial Budget. In the past year alone, educational allotments increased by more than $45,000,000. Yet British Columbia home-owners pay only 9% of the cost of public school education the lowest percentage in Canada.

It takes sound management to achie 3 continued progress in a field such as Education without increasing taxes the sort of management this Government provides in all areas of our social and economic-life.

IMPUDENT ALAN SAVES ENGLAND

LONDON (Reuter) — Wicketkeeper Alan Knott produced as innings of characteristic impudence to save England from disaster on the opening day of the fifth and final cricket test against Australia at The Oval Thursday.

Knott, happily hitting across the line of the ball and breaking numerous other rules, made 78 not out to lift England from 181 for eight to 267 for nine.

Apart from Peter Parfitt and John Hampshire, who put on 33 in 98 minutes for the third wicket, England's top batsmen failed dismally after Ray Illingworth had won the toss and elected to bat on an easy paced pitch.

Australia, which must win this match to draw the series 2.2, restricted England to 30 for two at lunch and had them 145 for six at tea. But, then Knott took over, completely changing the picture in an 81-run stand with No. 10 batsman Geoff Ar-

Stamp Dealer Evaded Tax

A Victoria stamp dealer pleaded guilty in provincial court Thursday to evading $39,273.16 in income taxes.

Kenneth Malcolm Robertson, 45, of 1720 Gonzales Crescent. January 1968 and April 1971, and making a false statement in his 1968, 1969 and 1970 income tax returns.

Victoria seed stores and garden shops this week unani-mously rejected the idea of selling the "yellow peril" in packets. It seems wild dandelions thrive only two well in our climate without introducing any cultured varieties.

A spokesman for McKenzie Seeds in Vancouver admits that there hasn't been a big steady demand in larger urban centres where there is a large Italian community. (Italian cookery features dandelion leaves in many of its salads, or stewed like spinach. Spring is usually the best time for using the leaves, as are tender and easier cooked.)

Whatever the tastes of the ethnic minorities, Victoria's city hall takes a less than enthusiastic line on the dande lion. Steve Powell, the city's weed inspector, says the plant is not classified as a noxious weed, but he personally considers it an "obnoxious" one. (Powell operates under the guidelines of the provincial Noxious Weeds Act of 1948, which lists 44 weedy varieties "destroyed or treated.")

The dandelion may be a nuisance to inspectos like Po-well, but as a species of vegetation, it holds a place that many a militant liberationist might envy. Its survival insinct is so well developed, say naturalists, that it is almost totally self-reliant, requiring no pollination to bring its annual crop of 12,000 seeds to fruition

The food value of its uncooked leaves is rated at 12.3 grams of protein, 14 milli-grams of iron and 163 milligrams of vitamin C, figures that exceed by three to four times what is present pound for pound in lettuce.

A spokesman for one large department store's garden department says she frequently uses the dandelion's two inner leaves in Spring as a green vegetable with crisp-fried bacon as a breakfast or late

A KILL OR CURE?

By SUSAN RUTTAN

Times Staff

It's been a good week for sun worshippers. Day after day of brilliant sunshine has given them plenty of opportunity to work on the perfect tan.

But for anyone with sensitive skin—such as blondes and redheads—too much sunbathing can have a painful aftermath, a bad sunburn. sunburn may cause only mild redness of the skin, a local dermatologist said this week, but at its worst it can-cause ulceration or even death. Death can occur when the body is so hadly burned that it becomes dehydrated, he said. However, the chances of that happening in Victoria's climate are pretty remote, he said.

For treating a sunburn, nothing beats putting skim milk compresses on the burnt area , said the dermatologist. No creams, lotions or ointments you can buy in the drugstore are as effective, he said—or as cheap.

"They don't do any harm,' he said, referring to these creams and lotions, "but they don't do any good."

Sunburn remedies that can do serious harm are any preparations ending in the phrase "-caine," said the derma-

No sunburn treatment actually helps heal the sunburnt skin, the dermatologist pointed out. It simply relieves the dis-comfort while the skin heals itself.

heads with sensitive skin is higher than average, he said.

"Skin cancer is extremely common in places like Califorand Australia," he said, because there are lots of fairskinned Anglo-Saxons getting long exposure to the sun.

Suntaining ages the skin, even less sensitive skin, prematurely, said the dermatologist. Years of regular tanning will make your skin look like that of a weatherbeaten farmer's, with psoriasis or acne normally find their conditions improve in the summer months.

Certain drugs, such as tetracycline, can make a person's skin more sensitive to the sun, he said.

Drugs Sensitize Skin

Doctors became aware of this when some schizophrenic patients in a New Westminster hospital began turning purple in the sun, said the dermatologist. It was found that the pa-tients' drugs had sensitized their skins to the sun.

Birth control pills are also culprits that may sensitize women's skins to the sun, he said. Women on the pill may get "the mask of pregnancy," a strange pattern on the upper part of the face that tans very darkly.

This "mask" is very noticeable, though women may try to hide it by combing their hair over their foreheads. Many of them end up in the dermatologist's office, where he lightens the patches with de-pigmenting creams.

This condition is fairly common, especially with brunettes, the dermatologist said

Perfumes are another agent that can sensitize the skin to the sun's rays, he said. He advised people to avoid using sun tan lotions that contained perfume, and advised women not to put perfume on in places that are exposed to the sun, such as behind the ears. Once the perfume has sensitized the skin behind the ears, a woman can get dark streaks there from the sun, said the dermatologist.

BUTCHART GARDENS — New and excitingly different week after week, season after season. Dedicated gardeners, skilful planning, constant replanting keeps them that way. Developed from an old abandoned limestone quarry over half a century ago they have grown to become one of the world's most unusual, written about, talked about, admired gardens. Embracing over 20 acres, actually six gardens in one — fabulous Sunken, spectacular Ross Fountain Garden, stately Italian, quaint Japanese, the great Stage Show Garden (now in full swing) and the English Rose Garden!

BUTCHART GARDENS ROMANTIC NIGHT LIGHTING-As darkness takes over, a thousand hidden lights combine with the moon and stars, the hills, trees and shrubs, lakes, lily ponds and fountains, to create a fairyland, softly scented by the flowers — a spectacle so unusual, so grand, it's indescribable! Featuring the Sunken Garden and the spectacular Ross Fountains in their majestic "Ballet to the Stars"

BUTCHART GARDENS FLORAL RESTAURANT — Open every day 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., serving delicious lunches, afternoon teas, and delightful buffet suppers in the evening. Continuous snack and coffee bar service.

Always Flowering ... Indoors and Out

A little plant which likes to bloom for almost six months outdoors is Begonia semperflorens. It will fulfill the specific name of "always flowering" if taken indoors for the remaining six months

This year you will find this little begonia in curbside planters on lower Douglas Street. The flowers are pure white in some, scarlet red in others, completely covering the

When you see them, you will agree Begonia sem-perflorens make an ideal summer planter decoration, for ei-ther patio, sundeck, apartment balcony or street planter.

Only nine inches tall and densely bushy right to soil level, these begonias are particularly wind resistant. The flowers are single and less than the size of a dime across. Other colors than red or white may be grown. Shades of pink and shades of red or salmon scarlet are available.

The gardener without a winter-heated greenhouse will need to buy young seedling plants during May. Seeds, which are dust fine, must be sown in mid-January, pricked out into flats as soon as the tiny leaves can be handled, and then encouraged to grow with the strengthening sunlight of March and April in a steady temperature of 60 to 70 degrees.

Any forcing with more heat and poor light will spoil your chances of strong plants, so it is scarcely possible to raise them under dwelling house conditions.

Just before a damaging frost (early October perhaps) lift a few of the most compact plants, each with a ball of undisturbed roots and pot into a sandy loam. Pinch off all flowers and tip growths

Place the pots in a 65 degrees temperature out of bright sunlight until new growth begins. It will soon come into bloom at house temperature, but don't keep continually in the warmest room. While humidity is needed in the air, begonias cannot be sprayed over the foliage with water, nor can the soil be wet on the surface.

When the pot is covered with the growth of the plant, watering is best done by standing in a pan of tepid water for an hour. This is presupposing there is a hole or holes in the bottom for drainage. Some plastic pots lack this.

Just for the fun of proving the "always flowering" name, take a plant or two with the freshest blooms, pot carefully, treat kindly, and see how long the plants keep up the display. Removing the spent flowers each day, you will find Begonia semperflorens will indeed always bloom. On a breakfast table near a window for the winter, you will get much pleasure from this little bit of experimenting.

Bow Legs Mothers' Fault

Occasionally I see a person going along the sidewalk, walking with markedly bowed legs, and I think how sad it is that the person's mother did not know enough to give her baby some codliver oil. Then that baby might have grown up to have sturdy,

Cod-liver oil is rich in Vitamin D, a vitamin that is essential to the proper development of the bones of children. The lack of enough Vitamin D produces a disease called rickets, which is more common among children of the poor, who have to live almost entirely on cereals because the mother cannot afford to buy meat. Also an infant can get rickets from lack of exposure to smallerth.

Curiously, Vitamin D does not seem to have any use in Curiously, Vitamin D does not seem to have any declarations, but during the early years it is essential.

A Philadelphia expert on rheumatism, Dr. George E. Ehrlich, recently noted that women with arthritis can sometimes find relief from morning stifness in their hands by wearing stretch gloves during the night. He got the idea from some of his woman patients who told him that when they wore stretch gloves during the day that we had been feel so good hat they kept wearing the day, that made hem feel so good hat they kept wearing

Dr. Ehrlich studied 56 woman patients and found that in all but three of the cases, the gloves completely or markedly reduced the morning stiffness. The subjects used different kinds of gloves, such as nylon knit and Spandex nylon.

Dr. Ehrlich said he did not know why the gloves gave the women such good relief.

Federal Election Ho-Hum Prospect

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION To date, interest among voters in the forthcoming Federal election is not very high. Whatever political party they favor, just over half the electorate report their personal interest in it as moderate. Iran Outlines Billion Plan

TEHRAN (Reuter) - Iran is pushing ahead toward the creation of a giant petro-chemical industry, seeking to become one of the world's major suppliers.

Iran was the first Middle East country to produce oil, more than 60 years ago. The country also pioneered the region's petrochemical industry.

The basic raw material for Iran's petrochemical industry is natural gas which has been discovered here in abundance.

More than three billion cubic feet of gas a day rise to the surface with oil production, much of it in the southern plains.

Under a gas-for-steel deal with the Soviet Union, about-one billion cubic feet of Iranian natural gas a day is being exported to Russia from the southern Iran oilfields through a 683-mile pipeline. With the projected construction of a second pipeline, the export will increase to 1.65 billion cubic feet a day.

The Soviets, who shared in building the pipeline, are completing a huge steel mill development in the southern town of Isfahan in return for the gas exports. They also will help to build the second

There is little doubt that supervision will be tightened and some heads roll. But will there be a permanent cure in a city so long conditioned to the idea that a certain amount of corruption and bribery is inevitable? Past history is hardly reassuring.

The Knapp commission noted in its report that scandal, reform, and fresh scandal appear to run in 20-year

Trouble started as soon as the police department was organized in its present form in 1844. There were major revelations of corruption in 1875, 1894, 1913, 1930 and 1949.

The investigation ordered by Gov. Franklin D. Roose-1930 produced two years of hearings. One of the juiciest revelations was that six innocent women were in jail because they refused to pay bribes to policemen who had threatened to charge them with prostitution. The women were freed; magistrate's courts were reformed. In 1949, Harry Gross, a

Television Questions and Answers

Q: About the possibility that Star Trek may be born again first as a movie and then as a continuing series: What are the chances the original cast can be regrouped for new filming? — R.H.H.

A: The odds are heavily against getting the cast to-gether. In the four years since the series went off several of them have become too expen-sive for the budget of a TV

As of now, there'll be no re-vival anyhow. Producer Gene Roddenberry was insulted when NBC asked him to pre-

Q: Please help us with this problem. How does Elizabeth Montgomery on Bewitched perform her disappearances

A: It's done by special effects and by clever editing. For instance, to make her disappear, the scene is shot with her in and with her out. The

she appears to disappear. Objects which appear to float on air actually travel along a string. The film is retouched to eliminate any traces of the string. And sometimes the trick is done is reverse. The Life of Leonardo da Vinci

By DAN LEWIS

Magnificent pictorially to the depth and quality of the subject itself, CBS-TV starts a subject itself, CBS-TV starts a five part series Sunday, August 13 on the life of Leonardo da Vinci, the great Florentine artist who nearly five centuries ago devised plans for a machine that would float the start and another than under water and another than would fly through the air.

The production won the grand prize at the Monte Carlo International Television Festival this year after an en-thusiastic run on Italian tele-

When Robert Wood, president of the CBS television network, announced the series in the spring, he acknowledged that this as a cultural pursuit spurred by the acceptance of and acclaim for the dramatic BBC series on The Six Wives of Henry VIII, which won surprisingly good audience ratings as well as critical accolades.

Re-establishing contact in the summer with more literate and greater sophistication in programming is not only diametric in contrast to traditional thinking but also per-haps a great revelation about audience attitudes.

The mere fact that the Henry VIII series was well received quickly established the notion that people are not just looking for light enter-tainment in summer heat. But it does pose another puzzlement. Now that greater dramatic quality has been accepted, why concentrate on the summer?

Why, for instance, could not The Life of Leonardo da Vinci have been a regular-season project? In recent weeks network presidents were proudly declaring to visiting editors in Hollywood that greater efforts were going to be exerted to produce more cultural programs. Well, CBS-TV as one spokesman explained, "The summer programming serves two principal purposes. For one thing, we fill the prime time and try to be entertaining. We're still in competition with other networks though the number of people watching drops sharply. So we do it with mostly reruns, and a sprinkling of first-runs, light, less costly shows. That's why you see so much variety in the new summer shows.

"Perhaps the day will come when American, TV, like the British, will offer mini series. We're so committed to the season-long series, the 24 to 26 episodes, that even suggesting anything short of that now for regular season. In roa grad measurements. regular-season programs would be considered irrational."

tifully done; but prehaps a bit overdone. The meticulous cinematography at times tends to be tedious viewing.

But the over-all product is of such quality that even PEARSON when patience is tested, the effort not only should be ap-plauded, but admired. The series is done from a narrative, a sort of You Are There — Italian style. The narrator, Giulio Bosetti, in modern attire, moves in and out of the Renaissance sets setting the scenes.

The series covers da Vinci's entire life, from his illegit-mate birth in 1452 to his death in the hands of King Francis I of France. Through the five parts, intimate glimpses of the man as the artist (including the classic Last Supper and Mona Lisa) and his pursuits as sculptor, physicist, botanist, anatomist, musician and even master mechanic re shown. His childhood into his early years as an apprentice artist under the tutelage of Andrea del Verrocchio, in Florence is covered in the opening seg-

The delicgue, originally done in Italian, and with English titles for foreign viewing, has been dubbed in English for the CBS series. This can be abrasive to some but it should not be that much of a distraction to undermine the total value of the series.

A St. Catherines, Ont., dentist named Dr. Dan Nelson day, August 13 at 9:00 p.m. in became intrigued by the Anegada wrecks and sought the cooperation of the Royal Onco-operation of the Royal On-tario Museum in planning a scientific expedition to chart the area. The ROM, which sponsors many archeological searches throughout the world, enthusiastically lent its support and when Dr. Nelson and the scientists went to the British Virgin Islands a film crew under director Robert Barclay went along to film the hunt.

The resultant film, entitled Virginquest, will be repeated

CBC-TV last October.

The one-hour film shows the finding of several wrecks including a Royal Navy vessel, and voice-over narration based on historical documents recalls the court of inquiry into the ship's loss and how she came to founder on the reef. This particular ship went down in 1808 when the captain thought he was headed for Puerto Rico. Some 20 years later it was discovered that there is a powerful current that draws ships towards the reef.

Supremes Popular Despite Losing Ross

By ALLAN MACAULAY

NEW YORK - If you have NEW YORK — It you have the idea that the Supreme might be hard to rap with, forget it. It's not the talk that's difficult; finding them all in one place sitting still is what's hard.

But this unlikely circumstance did come about one re-cent afternoon — a 15-minute period when they were be-tween the taping of a Dick Cavett Show segment and a scheduled appearance at the Copacabana

They were doing a two-week-stint there — and were not only sold out but oversold, it such a thing seems possible. Wayne Weisbart, the group's personal manager, tried to explain it, but to a mind trained plain it, out to a mind trained in strict double-entry book-keeping and having two plus-two equal four, the mathemat-ics weren't readily understandable

Also not readily under-andable was the complete standable was the composure of three girls who are probably three of the busiest performers in the world. They were probably more at ease than their visitor.

In an upstairs dressing room in the ABC Theatre, reading from right to left, were Mary Wilson, the only original Supreme, who, with 12 years of service, has to hold some kind of record for longevity; Jean Turrell who, Ross; and Lynda lead

Laurence, a Philadelphia girl that Motown sequestered that Motown sequestered from Stevie Wonder's back-up group to replace Cindy Birdsong. Cindy, for her part, had married a couple of years ago and had opted for mother-hood, sometime in the fall.

I had had a chance, 30 min-utes or so before our talk, to watch the Supremes do se-veral of their hit numbers — Where Did Our Love Go? Stop, in the Name of Love, and Baby Love, among others — on the closed-circuit moni-tor in a viewing room adjacent to the stage.

I had also watched as the Supremes talked with Cavett for a few moments. Cavett, displaying a certain perceptiveness, had asked the question, "Is there a fourth Supreme somewhere in the wings, ready to go on if some-body eats a bad clam, for in-stance?" The answer had been no, but one recalled that Lynda had substituted for Jean during an appearace in Hawaii.

The question in the upstairs ressing room, then, was dressing room, then, was "Who substituted for Lynda?" Mary cleared up that one, "We got Cindy to fill in," she said. "We've always been able to work things out, so I guess you could say, one way or another, there's a fourth Supreme somewhere."

But not on a steady basis, apparently.

The conversation around to how long it took a

Lynda, is a mong other things, also a skier, and she noted with some wistfulness that she hadn't been able to get to Camelback - one favorite areas not far from Philadelphia - for three vears, or so.

But then, there's a lot the girls haven't been able to do because of their heavy sched-ule. We're on the road about 11 months out of the year," Jean said. Their next stop would take them to the Palmer House in Chicago — already a sellout — and then some gigs that would leave them more or less within commuting distance of their homes in Los Angeles. That's the town where the Supremes live in their own unmarried lifestyles, and where much of the Motown operation has moved in recent years.

Dollar signs are not m tivating factors in the Su-preme's way of life, Mary, whom road manager George MacArthur had told us earlier knew she couldn't save the whole world but was willing to try, had adopted a young boy. To him, she's Mother, and he's 13 now, getting A's and B's in school. and B's in school.

dencing a certain amount of family pride. He usually beat the other guy's brains out.

It was recalled that Mary, like other Supremes and, indeed, like so many other top singers, had gotten her early training singing Gospel music in churches. The question—not always an easy one to phrase tactfully—is wether a young lady in her 20s, now able and allowed to think for herself, would carry that early learning into her daily life.

Many's answer — good grief, what 12 years of press conferences as one of the Supremes will do for one's self-confidence — was matter-of-fact, "I can't get to church every Sunday," she said, referring to what must be an obvious fact of life for anyone on tour 11 months out of 12. "But I do consider myself a religious person."

Mary has been part of the Supremes since the days when she auditioned as a scared kid of 14 and stayed on to become one of the world's busiest singers. A normal ego being what it is, one can't Jean, as a matter of fact, had once been part of that back-up group and remarked that singing in nightclubs sure had it all over getting one's brains beaten out in the ring.

"As a matter of fact, Ernde never had his brains beaten help wondering, however, it she's ever gotten bored with the role of a back-up singer to Diana Rose and Jean Turrell. She wasted no words with

"I just figure I'm making my contribution to the Supremes' sound," she said. "Every time I sing 'O-o-b baby, baby' I can do it with the same enthusiasm as the lead singer who is doing her part."

Actress Leads Hectic And Fulfilling Life

NEW YORK (UPI) lene Dahl finished off a successful run in Broadway's Applause, set out to locate a home in Manhattan, began reading scripts for a new mu-sical for fall, and went into the wig business styling for a major mail order company.

Why all the output of enhaired actress who already several fields and could relax now and take life very, very easy as a well-to-do matron?

"I thrive on work," said the Minneapolis-born actress. "Unless you're contributing in life, you're dead from the neck up."

Miss Dahl is the wife of Rounsevelle W. Schaum, former board chairman and chief executive officer of In-ternational Telecommunications Crop., who plans to turn his direction to Broadway in the fall also, in production.

In the fall, the family will settle into an apartment on New York's fashionable east

Meanwhile Miss Dahl, at 43. continues as a consultant to Kenyon and Eckhardt Adver-Kenyon and Ecknardt Advertising (she received the Advertising Club of New York's. Woman of the Year award in 1969 while she was a V-P at K and E) and it putting out a line of beauty products.

She got into the wig business because Sears Roebuck and Co. asked her to; they wanted her background in beauty to give a custom look to a line they were making from Kanekalon, the Japa-nese modacrylic. She's working with Bill Harwood, a stylwhich will be sold under her label.

Miss Dahl has written several books on beauty and figness and for 20 years had a undicated beauty column.

The actress said Applause, which was her first singing and dancing role in many years, had given her career a whole "new or rather en-larged direction. I liked the dancing and singing again." So she's considering more on the subject of liberation, Miss Dahl believes that a "woman should complement a man," not compete with him. It's a man's world . . . and I'm glad of it."

On bringing up children, she believes in a parental relationship strong enough for "teaching-learning" and letting them "do their own thing responsibly."

Her daughter's learning how to sew and shows keen interest in fashion — "she has more jewelry than I do." The actress was wearing one of the 10-year-old's Ali McGraw pull-on cloches. British Star Has Fear of Flying

HOLLYWOOD When Peter Finch returns to Europe to start Bequest to a Nation, in which he'll play the great British admiral, Lord Nelson, he'll travel cross-country by train, then take a ship across the Atlantic to a French port, travel again by train to Swit-zerland, and finally by auto to his home in Lugano.

Then he'll reverse the travel plan, going by car from his home, and train and boat across the English Channel and finally train again to London to start work.

It seems like an intolerable travel schedule, but Peter not only insists upon doing it that way, but has it written into all his contracts for films that he will not fly to locations or production centers. In fact, he will not fly anywhere.

It wasn't always like that. The esteemed actor, who was noninated last year for an Academy Award for his superb, sensitive portrayal of a homosexual doctor in Sunday, Bloody Sunday, flew for many years. But the last three times he flew were near di-

"On all of those flights, I had three call backs," Finch explained during a break in production of his latest film, a musical version of Lost Horizon. "Twice we lost engines shortly after takeoff in shortly after taxeon in the South Pacific, and a third time there was some other major problem with instruments and the plane groped through bad weather to get back to the airport. That did it. I decided three in a row was enough. Somebody was telling me something. I don't fly anymore."

Now, his contracts all specify that he will not fly and, what's more, if he's finishing a film and must report for another one, as in this case from Lost Horizon to Bequest to a Nation, Finch demands, too, that the contract stipulate he gets to go home first.

The day I visited with Finch on the set, the actor had a dinner date that evening with Hal Wallis, who will produce Bequest to a Nation.

"He (Wallis) thinks he's going to get me to fly home so he can start his picture sooner. It won't work," Finch said adamantly

Finch, incidentally, is quite an amateur painter, although he brushes aside the notion. Actually, he's sold a number of his paintings, including one to Peter O'Toole for 100 British pounds, about $245 in American cash. Peter gave details of the sale:

"Peter was drunk and so was I. When he said he want-ed to buy the painting, I liter-ally held his hand while he signed the cheque. It proves that the only way one can appreciate my paintings is when one is drunk."

THE FAMOUS CHICAGO CONSPIRACY TRIAL will be re-enacted on CBC television on Saturday, August 12, at 8 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6, in a 2½-hour BBC production. The leading roles in this television reconstruction are played by American and Canadian actors including Neil McCallum, Cliff Gorman, Peter Jobin and Al Freeman, Jr. as Bobby Seale (above right foreground). The dialogue has been boiled down from the 23,000-page trial transcript.

enactment of the events dur-ing the trial of Abbie Hoff-man, Bobby Seale and others received wide praise when it was telecast on CBC-TV last

Based on the actual trial transcript — some 22,000 pages — what is seen and heard on the screen is a faithful dramatization of what took place in the Chicago court-room presided over by Judge Julius Hoffman, from Sep-tember 1969 to February 1970.

The five-month trial arose out of the riots that took place in Chicago during the week of the 1968 Democratic National Convention, when thousands of dissidents poured into Chicago to express their dissatisfaction with the "system," the "establishment," and the Convention itself. The protesters ranged from the student "left" through pacifists and Quakers to the Yippies (Youth International Party) — in-

Following the four days of riots, several leaders of sa-sorted protest groups were charged with conspiring to incite a riot and at the trial the countroom itself became a cocipit for further demonstrations.

The leading roles in the television reconstruction are played by American and Canadian actors — Morris Carnovsky appears as Judge Julius Hoffman; James Patterson and Robert Loggia play the defence attorneys, William Kunstler and Leonard Weinglass respectively: Bar-William Kunstler and Leonard Weinglass respectively; Barton Heyman is the middle-aged pacifist leader David Dellinger; Cliff Gorman and Ronny Cox as the Yippie leaders Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin respectively; and Afreeman Jr. plays the part of Black Panther leader. Hugh O'Brian Sets Trend For New Type of TV Series

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON O'Brian, who has already been blamed for starting one major trend in television, is hoping to get the blame for starting another one. The jutchinned actor with the cantile vered shoulders will be back with a series this fall after being away from TV for 11 first trend that O'Brian started was the "adult western." He was the star of The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp, which arrived September 6, 1955. It beat Gunsmoke on the air by four days. Six years and 226 epi-sodes later, O'Brian had finished with Earp, but the trend turned prime time tele-vision into one mammoth shooting gallery.

An "adult western" is usually defined as one in which the hero kisses a girl instead of his horse. The definition isn't complete, for the nition isn't compiete, for the adult western actually deals in more complex human rela-tionships than the older "Ho-palong western" with its very, very good and very, very bad

Hugh O'Brian, by the time the trend was finished, was off making such feature films as Come Fly With Me (1963), Love Has Many Faces (1965), Little Indians

Ambush Bay (both 1966) and Africa-Texas Style (1967). He roamed the world, es-corting some of the most beautiful women and return-ing to the United States to work the summer tent shows. He spent a week with the late Dr. Albert Schweitzer in Africa and turned up for ten days as part of the audience at a congressional hearing on ra-dioactive fallout.

In appearance, he changed little. The lines in the hawklike face deepened, but he gained not an ounce of weight. He kept fit and never changed the living habits he had acquired as a drill instructor in the U.S. Marine Corps.

The motion picture business had turned sour and O'Brian was ready to return to television. Writer-producer Leslie Stevens was ready with a show. It was originally called Probe and the name was changed in July to Search. (TV lecturer Dr. Albert Burke had used Probe as the title of a series that ran for 250 fraga series that ran for 250 fragmitter has been implanted in his head. A button acts as a televison transmitter and he is forever in touch with headquarters and Burgess Meredith. (No, this cannot be done; electronics engineers din. (No, this cannot be done; electronics engineers chuckle when the possibility is mentioned, but no one is supposed to take such things seriously. The time is the indefinite future and, perhaps, by then, such equipment will be available.)

O'Brian, as Hugh Lock-wood, is the chief agent of the organization. Since the pre-miere, two additions have been made to the cast, Doug McClure and Tony Franciosa. They will take some of the burden off O'Brian and enable turn out several episodes si-

The series is, by design, off-beat and gimmicky. It is aimed at young viewers, many of whom never heard of the Wyatt Earp series.

Search will also be in tough competition. It is scheduled against the second season of Cannon, a private eye who manages to do the same sort of work without an electronic link to the home office. It is also scheduled against ABC-TV's Julie Andrews Show, exto have television's

DICK CAVETT HAS SHOW EXTENDED

NEW YORK (UPI) - ABC-TV has extended Dick Cavett's late night talk show for the rest of the year but after that he will rotate with Jack Paar and a variety of other entertainment shows, it was announced.

Starting in January Cavett and Paar each will appear one week out of four in the 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. EDT time slot. The network will offer dramas, mysteries, comedies and ical variety shows in the other two weeks.

Martin Starger, president of ABC entertainment, announced in April that Cavett, who frails NBC's Johnny Carson and CBS's late night movies in the ratings, would be cancelled unless he significantly increase his audience by July

A spokesman for Starger said ABC received "a tremendous amount of mail—in the thousands" protesting Cavett's cancellation. He said the letters came not only from the general public but "from our own people and from stars on other networks like Jack Lord of Hawaii Five-O on CBS."

Cavett, who began in television as a writer for Paar and later wrote for Carson, won an emmy this year for the Outstanding Variety Series.

The ABC spokesman said his ratings were "up somewhat recently," but apparently not enough for the network to keep him in his five-nights-a-week slot.

Paar, who has not appeared regularly on television since he ended his five-year late night talk show with NBC in 1962, signed with ABC in June to do one hour-long special a year

Dick t this

The Cavett and Paar shows both will originate in New York. The spokesman said "all of the nuts and bolts have not been worked out yet" for the other shows but they "will come from all over — New York, the West Coast and Europe."

Hopefully New Season Will Not Repeat Past Mistakes

By LAWRENCE LAURENT The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Every year about this time, weeks ahead of the new television season, the air becomes filled with promises. The slow pace of commercial business leaves the three networks with time to fill and that time is usually turned over to the men who promote the wonders that will be available

It is the happiest time of the television year; a time of certain winners and an absence of losers. The biggest problem is for the viewer who expects the promises to be kept; for those viewers who believe the wondrous programs being de-scribed in August are going to make a major difference in the quality of the programs seldom been a problem for CBC Radio stations. For years the CBC has been proyears the CBC has been producing its own broadcast recordings; in fact, over the last year, it has become the biggest record producer of Canadian talent in the country.

In July, 1971, CBC Broadcast Recordings, became the control of the control of the control of the control of the cast Recordings.

cast Recordings became a di-vision of the Radio Music and Variety Programming De-partment, under its head, John Roberts. To complete the formation of this new area, Bill Bessey was appointed as network supervisor of broadcast recordings.

Bessey, a CBC announcer for many years, was an obvi-ous choice for the newly created position. He has acted as an audio consultant for several years and in 1947 was one of the early pioneers in the original process of LP microgroove recordings. He was involved in the first CBC stereo broadcasts in 1960 and also did a nightly show for CBC Ottawa's Stereo Week a few years ago. He has a o

Bill Bessey, in short, is a self-made stereo expert, and his primary concern is quality control not just in Toronto but in trol, not just in Toronto but in other major production centres of Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal and Halifax.

Since the operation began several years ago, over 180 pop recordings have been issued by the variety department, about one-quarter of which have been released commercially, some in the U.S. and international mar-U.S. and international mar-

Gaglardi Biggest Issue Here

What's going on out there in election land? More to the point, what do the voters of B.C. think is going on?

In an attempt to find out what impact has been made by politicians in this so-far curiously featureless campaign, the Victoria Times has sent a team of reporters out into the hustings to talk to the people whose votes August 30 will decide the province's political future.

The first of the Times' reports "From the Hustings" comes from Kamloops where, not surprisingly, the main election issue seems to be the incumbent MLA Phil Gag-

KAMLOOPS - If there is a Social Credit riding in British Columbia that can get along without Premier Bennett it is probably Kamloops.

While other Socred campaigns in the B.C. interior are following the premier's lead and getting off to slow starts, Kamloops is off and running and it's not difficult to determine why.

Reports Anger Clancey

mier Bennett's public relations hirelings, said Thursday his lawyers are investigating news coverage of a Tuesday press conference he organized in Vancouver at which Pre-mier Bennett didn't appear.

Clancey said he was upset with the way Vancouver's newspapers and some radio stations reported the event. More than 30 reporters went to the news conference under the impression Premier Bennett would appear along with officials of Teck Corp., a resource firm involved in financing the development of the Sujunka coal deposit near Chetwynd, B.C.

Clancey, the focus of a series of angry exchanges with some reporters at the conference who charged they had been led there under false pretences, maintained that his office had never said the pre-mier would attend and that

Food prices in Canada soared last month with sharply higher price tags on meats and vegetables, sending the con-sumer price index up more than usual for this time of year.

In percentage terms, the over-all index rose 1.2 per cent in July and stood 4.5 per cent higher than a year earlier.

Food prices were up 3.6 per cent in July over June and stood 6.9 per cent higher than in July 1972. It was the stiffest jump in food prices in more than 10 years.

What a dollar bought last month could have been bought for 71 cents in 1961. A year ago, the consumer dollar was down to 75 cents on the same scale.

Statistics Canada cited no special reason for the higher food and other prices last month, except to say that increases were greater than usual.

However, farm market sources have indicated that higher prices are likely to prevail this fall for meats and vegetables in Eastern Canada.

Heavy rains have damaged field and food crops in Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec, reducing the supply of veg-etables and forcing farmers to pay higher prices for livestock feed.

Fallers End Rebel Stand

fallers have backed down in their stand against coast forest companies and their own union, and are expected to be back on the job Monday after a four-month wildcat

The decision to return to work came Thursday after a meeting in Parksville. Although the fallers voted 137-131 to stay off the job, their steering committee de-cided that there was enough support to warrant a return to president H. R. Chisholm said any men who have not returned to work by Tuesday will be considered to have resigned from the company.

"In view of the lengthy absences of some of our employees from their jobs, and the need to get into full production again, it will be necessary to hire or train replacements for any employees who do not intend to work,

"For this reason, those who are not back to work by Tuesday will have to be considered as having resigned from the company and their jobs will be posted for other union members to apply."

The fallers have been without money since they walked out for months ago and many are encountering financial difficulties. In addition, their cause has been weakened by a return to work of many of their own people.

Spokesman Chuck Evans said that with the defections from rebel ranks and the obvious split in opinion among the remainder, it was time to call it quits.

"We decided to recommend that they return to work, and they accept it under certain conditions," he said.

He said the provisions are that the forest companies agree to maintain seniority. reinstate any men who had been fired and show no discrimination to the strikers.

The fallers had been pushing for a return to a standardized version of their old piece-rate pay formula, instead of the flat rate of $80 a day ne gotiated on their behalf by their union, the International Woodworkers of America. The fallers feel they can make more money under the old formula, which varied from camp to camp.

But the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations bargainers for the 115 coast forest companies - both said there would be no re-opening of negotiations and that the contract agreed to would stand for its two-year life.

HOME OWNERSHIP DECLINES IN CANADA

OTTAWA (CP) - A further decline in home ownership was recorded in last year's Statistics Canada re ported Thursday.

In 1971, 60 per cent of the country's total number of dwellings was occupied by owners. The figure was 63 per cent in 1966, and at a peak 66 per cent in 1961. The total number of dwellings rose to six million last year from 5.2 million in the 1966 census. Rental accommothan half the increase.

The number of owner-oc-cupied dwellings rose 11 per cent in the five-year period to 3.6 million. Rental dwellings rose 26 per cent to 2.4 million.

Esquimalt's returning officer is having a tough time letting people know where to pick up election information — someone keeps destroying his signs.

In all correspondence, Herman Williams' office address is given as 500 Admirals Road, Lyall Street entrance. So, to avoid confusion, a canvas sign reading "Esquimatt Returning Office" was put in front of the door.

The next day, it was "torn to ribbons," said Williams.
But he didn't give up. Last week, a new sign was planted

This morning it was found lying on the grass, smashed to pieces.

"We don't know whether to put a new one on a rack and bring it in at night or not — we're too busy right now to think about it," said Williams.

Bylaw to Kill Sign Firm-Official

One practical effect of Victoria's new sign bylaw will be to put Seaboard Advertising Co. Ltd. "completely out. of business," district manager Wilf Fraser predicted today

Alfred W. Savage, a special investigator from the department of national revenue and taxation, said Robertson reported a net profit from his stamp business of $37,458.41 during the three years, but failed to report another $127,452.75.

Savage said Robertson's books were seized on July 16, 1971.

He said Robertson, on retirement from the army in 1960, started the mall-order stamp business with his wife. The firm's profits were divided 75 per cent to Robertson and 25 per cent to his wife.

Savage said Robertson personally maintained the records the partnership and prepared year-end summaries of the firm's revenue and expenses.

He gave the summaries to an accounting firm which repared the financial statements for the partnership, and Robertson's and his wife's personal income tax returns. Robertson's wife was never aware of her husband's activi-

Gaglardi Biggest Issue Here

What's going on out there in election land? More to the point, what do the voters of B.C. think is going on?

In an attempt to find out what impact has been made by politicians in this so-far curiously featureless campaign, the Victoria Times has sent a team of reporters out into the hustings to talk to the people whose votes August 30 will decide the province's political future.

The first of the Times' reports "From the Hustings" comes from Kamloops where, not surprisingly, the main election issue seems to be the incumbent MLA Phil Gaglärdi.

KAMLOOPS — If there is a Social Credit riding in British Columbia that can get along without Premier Bennett it is probably Kamloops.

While other Socred campaigns in the B.C. interior are following the premier's lead and getting off to slow starts, Kamloops is off and running and it's not difficult to determine why.

Reports Anger Clancey

Bill Clancey, one of Premier Bennett's public relations hirelings, said Thursday his lawyers are investigating news coverage of a Tuesday press conference he organized in Vancouver at which Premier Bennett didn't appear.

Clancey said he was upset with the way Vancouver's newspapers and some radio stations reported the event. More than 30 reporters went to the news conference under the impression Premier Bennett would appear along with officials of Teck Corp., a resource firm involved in financing the development of the Sukunka coal deposit near

Joint Aircraft Alliance Seen

VANCOUVER (CP) - Expanding technological capabilities and burgeoning economies of nations bordering the Pacific basin trading area presage the emergence of strong new trans-ocean industrial alliances in the field of aviation, a United States executive said here.

Carl Kotchian, president of Lockheed Aircraft Corpora-ton, made the prediction in an address to members of the Canadian Aviation industry. He spoke on the eve of the 11th annual Abbotsford International Air Show.

He noted that Lockheed has proposed a joint Canada-Japan-U.S. program for a future new member of the L-1011 tristar family — a smaller twin-engine version to be available in the mid 1970s to meet a projected world requirement for 700 to 800 such aircraft.

Whereas 85 per cent of the jet transports flying the world's airline routes today have come from U.S. production lines — two things have happened that portend a change," Kotchian said.

He cited the cost of financing a new aircraft develop-ment and the developing technologies of other nations

Kotchian also predicted a substantial upswing in revenue passenger miles travelled on Pacific area airlines. Lock-heed analysts have placed the increase at a whopping 370 per cent in the 1970s.

The survey was conducted by George M. Charles, an associate professor of finance.

Charles sent questionaires to all brokerage firms which are members of Canadian stock exchanges and to mutu-al fund management companies, insurance companies with investment portfolios, trust companies and banks. He received replies from 54 per cent of those approached.

Eighty-three per cent said they were opposed to the present system. The majority of these favored a strong na tional securities system while others said they would accept a national securities act jointly administered by a national commission and the various provincial commissions The 17 per cent who favored retention of the present system said provincial commissions are performing ade-quately and creation of a national commission would increase bureaucracy.

Charles himself, while fa-voring a single federal securi-ties agency, said he felt the most practical solution for the Timm HONDAS minut present lies in the joint fe-deral-provincial area.

He proposed a uniform se-curities act for all provinces, with representatives of a federal agency in each centre where provincial commissions are located.

What hair I did have was fairly long and an hour later, with the help of lots of soap, a pair of scissors and a safety razor, the deed was done.

Bald heads, although unfashionable these days, aren't new. Some ancient Egyptians and Mayans had their heads shaved. Buddhist monks are ritually baid. Even some Elizabethans apparently favored-the lockless look. Then there are the hapless types who didn't have any choice. The main reason

What's going on out there in election land? More to the point, what do the voters of B.C. think is going on?

In an attempt to find out what impact has been made by politicians in this so-far curiously featureless campaign, the Victoria Times has sent a team of reporters out into the hustings to talk to the people whose votes August 30 will decide the province's political future.

The first of the Times' reports "From the Hustings" comes from Kamloops where, not surprisingly, the main election issue seems to be the incumbent MLA Phil Gaglardi.

KAMLOOPS — If there is a Social Credit riding in British Columbia that can get along without Premier Bennett it is probably Kamloops.

While other Socred campaigns in the B.C. interion are following the premier's lead and getting off to slow starts, Kamloops is off and running and it's not difficult to determine why.

Reports Anger Clancey

mier Bennett's public relations hirelings, said Thursday his lawyers are investigating news coverage of a Tuesday feel neutral about Gaglardi as press conference he organized in Vancouver at which Premier Bennett didn't appear.

Clancey said he was upset with the way Vancouver's newspapers and some radio stations reported the event.

More than 30 reporters went to the news conference under the impression Premier Bennett would appear along with officials of Teck Corp., a resource firm involved in fithe Sukunka coal deposit near

Clancey, the focus of a series of angry exchanges with some reporters at the conference who charged they had been led there under false pretences, maintained that his office had never said the pre-mier would attend and that

Gaglardi's personality is one of the best known in politics in the province. It com-pares, by its intensity, with Bennett himself. Terrific confidence, activity, the will-ingness to wade into con-troversy, can describe both men and have meant success for both. In the end, they have ferent men but they are both giants of this province's peculiar type of politics.

It is almost impossible to a man or as a politician. traordinary eagerness of the opposition campaigns.

There is something about Gaglardi's style that makes his opponents strongly suspect he will use dirty pool if he has to, to win the election. Take the sign controversy that bub bled up this week.

Kamloops is one of those ridings that goes sign crazy during elections. The signs turn up on front lawns like dandelions and this week the party staffs were in various stages of rage as signs began to disappear "systematically."

Curiously, Socred Socred signs weren't disappearing, but those of all the other parties

Food prices in Canada soared last month with sharply higher price tags on meats and vegetables, sending the consumer price index up more than usual for this time of year.

In percentage terms, the over-all index rose 1.2 per cent in July and stood 4.5 per cent higher than a year earlier Food prices were up 3.6 per cent in July over June and stood 6.9 per cent higher than in July 1972. It was the stiffest jump in food prices in more than 10 years.

for 71 cents in 1961. A year ago, the consumer dollar was down to 75 cents on the same scale.

Statistics Canada cited no special reason for the higher food and other prices last month, except to say that increases were greater than usual. However, farm market sources have indicated that higher prices are likely to prevail this fall for meats and vegetables in Eastern Canada. Heavy rains have damaged field and food crops in East-ern Ontario and Western Quebec, reducing the supply of vegetables and forcing farmers to pay higher prices for livestock feed.

Fallers End Rebel Stand

The coast region's rebel fallers have backed down in their stand against coast forest companies and their own union, and are expected to be back on the job Monday after a four-month wildcat

But the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations — bargainers for the 115 coast forest companies — both said there would be no re-opening of negotiations and that the contract, agreed to would stand for its two-year life.

With the fallers, or most of them, on strike, few logs were being felled in the coast region, and as a result the industry has been forced to lay off large numbers of workers.
